No Using 'The M Word' on Oct. 29! from Hazzan Stein

In 5th grade, as a student at the Solomon Schechter Day School in Providence, RI, my class studied the Book of Exodus. Our teacher, Geveret Kaunfer, was a brilliant educator who came from a family of Jewish scholars who traced their lineage back to Maimonides. We learned the text itself – in Hebrew – as well various Midrashim and other rabbinic sources. The one I remember most clearly was Martin Buber's commentary on what is a miracle. Pretty cool considering we were 10 and 11 years old.

One source Geveret Kaunfer warned us about referencing was what she referred to as "The M word." What was "The M word?" That's right, The Movie. We had all seen the 1956 Cecil B. DeMille epic The Ten Commandments, and with its combination of textual faithfulness and creative license, it became a constant source of confusion for us as we navigated the original biblical text. "But in the movie..." became a popular exclamation when what we read in class did not conform to that which we had seen with our own eyes (albeit on the small screen). "Uhuh," Geveret Kaunfer would remind us. "No using 'The M word.'" And so we learned, some of the time, not to use the forbidden word.

When I was in college, a new version of "The M word" came out. In 1998, DreamWorks Pictures released the animated film The Prince of Egypt. Like its predecessor of over half a century, it too is both faithful to the Bible in places but less so in others, not the least of which is the invented (albeit effective) plot device of imagining Moses and Pharaoh as having grown up as brothers, a trope also used to similar effect in The Ten Commandments.

And yet, despite the liberties it takes, The Prince of Egypt is a delightful watch with hauntingly effective visuals and stirring songs, the most famous being the beautiful "When You Believe," which boldly features a children's chorus singing verses from Shirat Hayam – The Song of the Sea – in Hebrew. If you haven't seen it, I highly recommend a viewing.

Or... you could see a staged version at our annual concert: On Sunday, October 29 at 4 p.m., we will present The Music of The Prince of Egypt, live at CBINT!

I am excited to once again welcome a cast of Milwaukee's top musical theater performers led by Tim Rebers who directed last year's successful Stephen Sondheim review. Headlining the cast is Ben Tajnai as Moses and Ryan Charles as Ramses. Ben Tajnai made his CBINT concert debut as the gargantuan Goliath in King David and has since become somewhat of a celebrity singing the National Anthem at countless local sporting events, including the Bucks championship winning game. Ryan Charles also made his CBINT debut in King David as the long-locked defiant Absalom, later taking the lead role in Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. Both are thrilled to return to CBINT for our next production.

I hope everyone will attend this special performance, both to enjoy the music and pageantry, and to help support our congregation in our annual fundraiser. As always, if you are interested in contributing as a sponsor, please let me know. I greatly appreciate your support and generosity in making this another successful event.

Guess Who's Coming to Dinner from Beata Abraham

Sure, Sukkot may be the most difficult Jewish holiday to explain to non-Jews, or as one instagrammer put it:

"Trying to explain Jewish holidays to people is all well and fine until you get to 'and in this one we sit in homemade huts in our gardens for 8 days and also once a day we perform an interpretive dance with a lemon and a small tree.'"

But in spite of the challenging optics, there are many reasons why Sukkot is an undeniable Tishrei highlight. Nestled humbly between Yom Kippur and Simchat Torah, Sukkot is a weeklong festival in which we honor the 40-year journey of the Israelites through the desert following their escape from slavery in Egypt. The Israelites built and dwelled in temporary hut-like structures for the duration of their journey, and so we mark the holiday by building our own temporary structures in which to eat, drink, and, for you intrepid types, even sleep.

Sukkot gets bonus points right out of the gate just for taking place in the fall and forcing us outside to enjoy the crisp air and, depending on where you live, the striking spectrum of fall foliage. And, if you love to build things and are a hosting geek, this is truly your perfect holiday.

But that's not all. There is a magically mystical element to this holiday as well. According to the Zohar, the foremost book of Jewish mysticism, Sukkot is the one time of the year when you will be called upon to host the biblical dream team, otherwise known as the Ushpizin (guests, in Aramaic).

The Zohar tells us, that the Sukkah itself manifests such an intense concentration of spiritual energy, that during Sukkot the souls of the seven great leaders of Israel; Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, Joseph, and King David, actually leave Gan Eden because they are drawn to the presence of the divine light in the temporal Sukkah, here on earth (Zohar - Emor 103a). Pretty amazing, right?

What this means is that all seven Ushpizin will be present in your Sukkah throughout the week of Sukkot. However, each day one will take their turn to lead the other six. Some Jews have the custom to welcome these ancient MVPs on the first day of Sukkot by reciting a long mystical invitation. Many Sephardic Jews set aside a special chair for their guest of honor, adorned with fancy cloth and books of Torah.

The Zohar tells us that each of the seven Ushpizin represents a rudimentary Sefira (a metaphysical pathway) through which the world is spiritually nurtured and ultimately perfected (Derech Hashem 3:2:5, Zohar Chadash, Toldot 26c; cf. Zohar 2:256a). This means that the Ushpizin each show up in your Sukkah as a conduit of their own, uniquely individual, spiritual attributes.

The MVP guest roster in order of appearance and attribute:

- Abraham represents love and kindness.
- Isaac represents restraint and personal strength.
- Jacob represents beauty and truth.
- Moses represents eternality and dominance through Torah.
- Aaron represents empathy and receptivity to divine splendor.
- Joseph represents holiness and the spiritual foundation.
- David represents the establishment of the kingdom of Heaven on Earth.

Lest you be intimidated by these sacred Sukkah crashers, know that the Zohar has not intended for them to be your only guests. As Jews, our main focus must always remain on helping our fellow earthly residents in a tangible way, so to ensure that we give adequate thought to hosting those in need with as equal enthusiasm, the Zohar continues:

'Sukkot is the one time of the year when you will be called upon to host the biblical dream team...'

human condition.'

"One must also gladden the poor, and the portion that would otherwise have been set aside for these Ushpizin guests should go to the poor. For if a person sits in the shadow of faith and invites those guests and does not give their portion to the poor, they all remain distant from him...." Maimonides backs this The Jews ... were also

Maimonides backs this up by telling us that feeding those in need is not just a nice thing to do, but is an actual religious obligation:

"While eating and drinking himself, one is obligated to feed the stranger, orphan, and widow, along with the other unfortunate poor.... [One who does not] is not enjoying a mitzvah, but rather his stomach" (Laws of Yom Tov 6:18).

As Jews, we are not strangers to the concept of embracing vulnerability in the face of adversity. In fact, it has often been the source of our strength. In his book, "A History of the Jews," Paul Johnson wrote: "The Jews were not just innovators. They were also exemplars and epitomisers of the human condition. They seemed to present all the inescapable dilemmas of man in a heightened and clarified form.... The Jews were the emblem of homeless and vulnerable humanity. But isn't the whole earth no more than a temporary transit camp?" We may at times have been cantankerous, obstinate, defiant, and wayward, but like

Abraham and Sarah from the beginning of our history, when it came down to it, we Jews have undeniably shown we have the mettle to leave security behind and get up and follow God's voice leading us into the unknown. Sukkot is a perfect reminder of not only what we have been capable of in the past, but also the legacy of grit, that against all odds, we, as a people, will bring into the future.

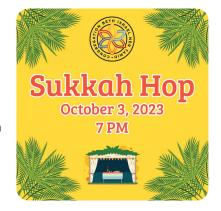

Shana Tova from Sisterhood! And Join the Sukkah Hop!

We hope everyone has enjoyed celebrating Rosh HaShana with family and friends. We also hope you have taken time to reflect and to have a meaningful Yom Kippur. Once again we welcome back the fall season with all our lovely autumn holidays in store. While we truly love the summer, we feel grateful to the return of the High Holidays to help us feel grounded as we switch seasons.

Responses from our survey told us we need to create more opportunities to be social together and learn more about the members of our Kehillah. Please "Save The Date" and join us for Sisterhood's Progressive Sukkah Hop on Tuesday, October 3, at 7 p.m. Depending on the number of sukkahs available, we'll enjoy some nosh in one sukkah and dessert in another! Let us know if your sukkah is available to add as one of our stops! Look ahead for more information to RSVP and for sukkah locations in an eblast.

Calling all trivia buffs! Please join us for our Trivia Game at MobCraft Beer Brewery on Sunday, October 22 (after the Packers game). This is a fun location for this fun game! An upcoming eblast will have more information.

We are extending our invitation for those interested in getting involved with a great group of women. We still have open Board positions available, and we would love your help in making this year a great one! Sisterhood welcomes and needs your input, program ideas, and commitment to CBINT. Remember that we are YOUR Sisterhood. We succeed only with you as part of the team.

Please reach out to us for more information and join us! May you be inscribed and sealed for a good year!

Barbara Tenin (barbara.tenin@gmail.com) & Armona Nadler-Strick (armonarose@gmail.com) Sisterhood co-presidents.

Starring Ben Tajnai as Moses and Ryan Charles as Ramses.

"You Are So Not Invited to My Bat Mitzvah" - a D'var from Allie Barry

There's been a lot of buzz around Adam Sandler's new movie, "You Are So Not Invited to My Bat Mitzvah," and for good reason. (If you haven't watched this Netflix release, read on with caution because there will be spoilers.)

The movie tells the tale of a 13-year-old girl who is on a journey preparing for her Bat Mitzvah. Of course, there is quite a lot of drama and some incredibly embarrassing moments that only happen when you're 13. Absolutely the worst time. Her focus is how her peers will perceive her, and she identifies a social pressure to have an extravagant party, to be the best of the best. Her parents (and Rabbi Rebecca) deeply care about the other parts of the B'nei Mitzvah process, objectively the whole point of the whole shebang, which is her Torah portion and her Mitzvah Project.

Beyond the surface, "You Are So Not Invited to My Bat Mitzvah" shows aspects of Jewish life and identity that I hadn't really seen before in media. Of course I watched "Unorthodox" when it came out, and I saw the difficult and real story of a young woman living an ultra-Orthodox life. While that is, technically, representing Jewish life and culture, it is a significantly small part of the ever-evolving patchwork tapestry that makes up Jewish life, culture, and identity. (And that story is a particularly dark one.)

Watching this new movie, starring the Sandler Family, was a breath of fresh air as it shed light on a broader spectrum of Jewish life, particularly during the momentous B'nei Mitzvah occasion. It artfully explores the complexities of Jewish identity entwined with the struggle of an adolescent girl finding her individuality, a theme that resonates with me deeply. This film not only warms my heart but also nourishes my soul. And as for the portrayal of Hebrew school in the movie, I felt compelled to write about it here. They depict a specific facet of Jewish life and learning, highlighting the central role of Shul School. In these scenes, we witness students entering a space where they encounter familiar faces from day school but in a distinct setting, one where they all share the core identity of Judaism. The film also touches on the universal struggles adolescents have with the concept of God, the state of the world, and their own place within the Jewish community.

As we approach the start of our Shul School season (beginning on October 15), I can't help but consider the parallels in the movie. While our school's structure doesn't necessarily involve theatrical retellings of Torah stories or teachers responding with cringy songs to deep theological questions, seeing supplementary Jewish education portrayed in a film is genuinely refreshing and exciting.

Moreover, the film offers a compelling representation of what it's like for a young Jewish individual to explore and engage with their Judaism and their relationship with God. Throughout the movie, we're privy to Stacy's intimate conversations with God. Her words, "Hey God, it's me, Stacy. But I guess you already knew that...," encapsulate a profoundly personal moment that reminds us of the journey we embark on in our relationship with God, especially during such pivotal moments in our lives.

"You Are So Not Invited to My Bat Mitzvah" not only presents a refreshing perspective on Jewish learning through synagogue schools, but also delves into the inner workings of a young Jewish person's exploration of their faith and relationship with God. It's a film that resonates deeply with those who understand the significance of these experiences, making it a valuable addition to the portrayal and representation of Jewish life and identity.

Thank you Melinda & Bruce for Picnic Generosity

Our CBINT family extends a heartfelt and appreciative thank you to Melinda Steffey and Bruce Weiss for their generous sponsorship of the delicious CBINT Picnic lunch and beverages. Mitzvah Garden Delivers!

CBINT member and Social Action Committee garden volunteer Karen Rachum had the honor of delivering a large donation to Tikkun Ha'Ir and their Veggie Chop Shop cooking volunteers. Amanda Ruppenthal Stein donated beautiful produce from her garden, as well as two harvests from the Mitzvah Garden. Our donation included hot peppers, tomatoes, squash, zucchini, cucumber, lettuce, cilantro, and dill. Our Master Gardener volunteer Janet Silverman helped us all summer with watering and caring for the plants. Our Mitzvah Garden is an approved project for any Master Gardener to earn their volunteer hours.

MAZEL TOVI

Shiri Hirschtritt is looking forward to celebrating her Bat Mitzvah on Saturday, October 14, 2023, at CBINT. Shiri is a 7th grade student at Milwaukee Jewish Day School and enjoys dancing, playing the piano, spending time with her friends and family, and traveling. Shiri has been a competitive dancer at Bella Via Dance Studio for the last five years, and for her Mitzvah Project she is collecting used dance costumes and apparel as well as monetary donations for Dance Fairies, an organization that redistributes dance apparel around the world to kids in need. Joining Shiri in her celebration are her parents Noa Holoshitz and Todd Hirschtritt, her younger brothers Doron and Eitan, as well as friends and family from around the country. Shiri would like to thank Hazzan Stein and Rabbi Alter for numerous hours they put in helping her prepare for her big day.

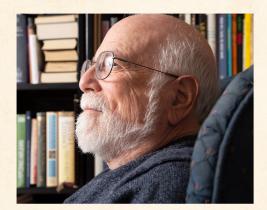

Why Were Jewish Artists of Antiquity Obsessed with Sukkot?

WHERE: CBINT Community Sukkah DATE: Wednesday, October 4 TIME: Minyan at 6PM, Learning at 6:30PM

While Medieval Hagadot manuscripts were full of images of Passover, in other Jewish art of antiquity - manuscripts, synagogue mosaics, and even Roman period coins - the only holiday images were of the holiday of Sukkot!
